WELCOME TO ESOPRS 2026

It is with great pleasure that we invite you to the 44th Annual Meeting of the European Society of Ophthalmic Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery (ESOPRS), to be held from September 10 to 12, 2026, in Cascais, Portugal.

For the first time, Portugal will host the ESOPRS Annual Meeting, and we are honoured to welcome you to Cascais – a unique destination where history, science, nature, and culture meet in perfect harmony.

Our goal is to offer not only an outstanding scientific meeting, but a memorable academic and human experience, where tradition, innovation, interaction, and collegiality converge. We hope ESOPRS 2026 will be remembered as a congress that honoured the past, embraced the future, and continuously elevated its scientific standards through meaningful exchange.

Come and feel the light, the ocean, and the spirit of Cascais.

Come and be part of ESOPRS 2026.

A Special Pre-Congress Educational Opportunity

Advanced Oculoplastic Dissection The Functional and Aesthetic Continuum

While the official dates of the congress remain September 10-12, the scientific and educational experience of ESOPRS 2026 will be further enhanced this year. In addition to the established congress programme, we are pleased to offer—exceptionally for 2026—a Pre-Congress Cadaver Dissection Course on September 9. This exclusive initiative represents a unique academic opportunity and a true educational highlight of the meeting.

This advanced, hands-on cadaver course will provide participants with the opportunity to explore surgical anatomy in depth, refine advanced techniques, and strengthen clinical decision-making within a structured, high-level educational setting. This exceptional initiative further elevates the scientific profile of the meeting and reflects ESOPRS' enduring commitment to excellence in surgical education. The course is ideally suited for oculoplastic surgeons, fellows, and experienced ophthalmologists seeking to advance their expertise in both reconstructive and aesthetic oculoplastic surgery.

Pre-Meeting Course

The meeting will officially begin with the traditional Pre-Meeting Course, designed as a comprehensive and structured review of current concepts in oculoplastic and reconstructive surgery. This course is particularly suited for young ophthalmologists, fellows, and colleagues who wish to consolidate their knowledge and remain at the forefront of the specialty.

Scientific Program & Case Discussions

The main congress will take place over two days of high-level scientific exchange, featuring rapid-fire presentations, free papers, and lectures delivered by distinguished international keynote speakers.

In addition to these sessions, interactive round tables with discussion panels will play a central role in the scientific program. These panels are designed to promote active participation, critical thinking, and open dialogue among faculty and attendees.

The scientific program will encompass both classical and emerging themes, with special emphasis on artificial intelligence in oculoplastics, advanced orbital and endoscopic approaches, reconstructive challenges, facial trauma, and the evolving interface between function, aesthetics, and technology, alongside the core pillars of eyelid, lacrimal, and orbital surgery.

Delegates from all over the world will gather in Cascais, creating a truly international environment – ideal for scientific exchange, collaboration, and the development of lasting professional and personal connections.

CONGRESS VENUE

Surprising in its choice of materials, such as wood and zinc, it was built in 2001 based on a design by architect Regino Cruz, who also designed the Atlantic Pavilion (now MEO Arena) and co-designed the Vasco da Gama Tower, at the northern end of Parque das Nações in Lisbon.

The building consists of two large structures connected by the roof: one, for public use, characterized by its transparency to the outside and the flexibility of space occupation, which allows for the pro-table use of interior areas; and the other, more opaque and slender, intended for meeting rooms and offices, which has commercial areas on its ground floor arranged in a gallery and open to a central square facing the gardens of the Estoril Casino.

In 2002, it was awarded the "Excellent in Innovation and Architectural Quality" mention in the Portuguese Real Estate "Oscars" competition. It is also the only holder in Portugal of the Green Venues certificate, for enabling rational management of its energy needs.
